

Day 1 - San Francisco to Bodega Dunes State Park

72 miles, 4,431 ft total elevation gain

Leaving San Francisco this morning, and head through the small North Bay towns of Sausalito, Ross, San Anselmo, and Fairfax. Shortly before lunch, take a turn towards the Petaluma hills, and enjoy miles of rolling farmland and rural countryside. Lunch will be pond-side at a local cheese factory before continuing through Marin County, and hitting the coast in Bodega Bay.

Day 2 - Bodega Dunes State Park to San Francisco

68.9 miles, 5,025 ft total elevation gain

From Bodega Bay, wind down the coast and head inland to the quaint towns of Valley Ford and Tomales. After biking along the shore of Tomales Bay, stop in the center of Point Reyes Station for a picnic lunch before continuing to Stinson Beach and the coastal redwoods. The last major climb of the trip takes you up the side of Mt. Tamalpais, into the Marin Headlands and Sausalito, before crossing the iconic Golden Gate Bridge into San Francisco. The ride ends back in the Presidio, beneath the Golden Gate.
